

Count by genre of songs (where song length > mean value)

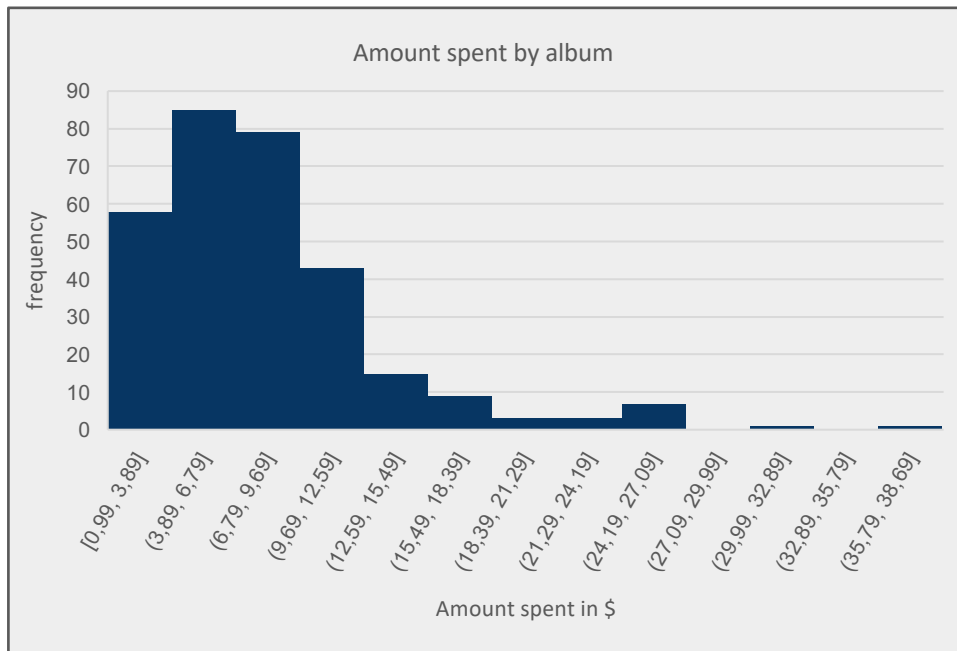

In this bar chart, you can see the genres where the songs are above the average song length (in milliseconds). You can clearly see that the songs in the genre "Rock" are by far the most frequently above the average song length in terms of song length. The genre "Rock" is followed by the genres "TV Shows" and "Metal" or "Drama".

Count by genre of songs (where unit price > mean value)

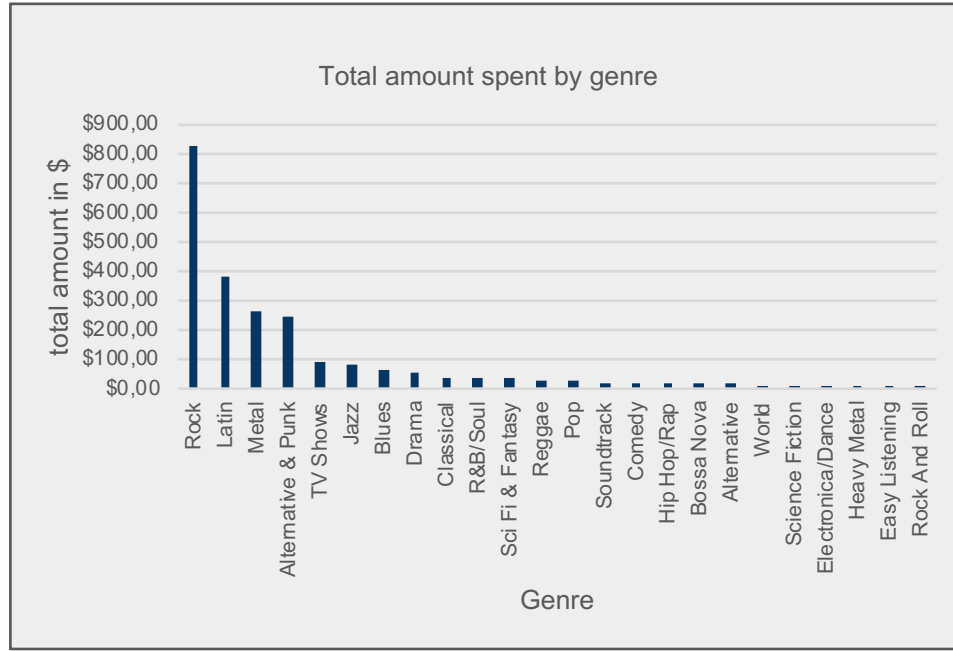

In this bar chart, you can see the genres where the songs are above the average unit price (in dollars). It can be clearly seen that the songs in the genre "TV Shows" are by far the most frequently above the average unit price in terms of unit price. The genre "TV Shows" is followed by the genres "Drama" and "Sci Fi & Fantasy".

Amount spent by album

In this right-skewed histogram, where the mean > median, you can see the total spending per album. These total outputs were summed up in individual areas. So you can see that most of the total spend per album is in the range between $3.89 and $6.79. Followed by the range 6.79 dollars to 9.69 dollars.

Total amount spent by genre

This bar chart shows the total expenditure per genre. It can clearly be seen that the genre "Rock" has the highest total expenditure. Twice as high as the second genre "Latin", which is followed by the genre "Metal" and "Alternative & Punk".